WELCOMING THE FUTURE

Each year, The Trust’s annual report celebrates the prior year’s successes. On the eve of our 100th anniversary, we not only share the good news of 2022, we look forward to a next century of service: connecting New York’s most generous donors with our most impactful nonprofit partners. No one has a better perspective or a bigger investment in our region’s future than our tech-savvy, eco-friendly, empathetic, and full-hearted youth. We hope you draw hope and inspiration from the words of Eileen Miranda, a poet with DreamYard, a Trust grantee that nurtures the arts in the Bronx.

It’s an honor to be your partner at The Trust.

One in a MILLION

By Eileen Miranda

The city that never sleeps is still waking up
A year in normalcy and it seems like nothing's changed
Not the mouse-colored streets
Or the smoke-filled air
Not the lines in Manhattan
Or the germ-filled lairs

New York Unique, Unique New York
The romanticized comedies light up foreigners' hearts
The chances of meeting someone — one in a million
Yet we come see Lady Liberty wishing on luck

You could find your next employer on an elevator ride
Meet the love of your life in a cafe
Trip on the street and see your best friend

The city is large but the world is small

New York, my love
You intoxicate me
I fall, who cares?
Love? Yourself.
Strangers on the street, turn a blind eye
My business is mine and yours is your own
The air — it suffocates

New York, “concrete jungle”
A jungle it is not, for we plant trees
You can find your group of joggers running along Central Park
A concrete maze

Dreams thrive
For in New York the impossible seems possible
A collection of internationals and homeboys in sight
The “one in a million” seems like it just might...

New York is romantic — dim lights, light breeze Restaurants in every corner, oh the internationals, love to see

New Yorkers complain

The A train is delayed
I can't find a seat
I missed my bus
I'm hurting my feet
Cracked streets and heads surround me
Really loud beats
But we'd never trade it for the world

New York, a world
Glorious and filled with well...
E v e r y t h i n g

The lights, my dreams
The noise, my heart
The people, my community
Its walls, apart
Division unites us
And together we thrive
For New York gives us hope
Rather than reasons to die

New York, the city that never sleeps,
But its heart is my beat

Welcome to New York

EDUCATION

BUILDING A BETTER FUTURE THROUGH EDUCATION

“Children are the fabric of the city,” said David Adams, chief executive officer of Urban Assembly, a Trust grantee that uses data-driven learning tools and programs to boost student growth and school performance. “When we do right by them, they do right by us.”

Improving public schools has been a top priority for The Trust since awarding its first grant in 1924 to P.S. 9 in Manhattan in honor of a beloved teacher.

“The Trust has a long and distinguished commitment to K-12 education,” said Shawn Morehead, vice president for grants. “Trust grants have worked toward a public school system that makes sure all children—no matter their race, culture, immigration status, sexual orientation, physical ability, or socioeconomic class—have access to a quality education.”

The scale and complexity of educating New York’s children is daunting. The city has one million students enrolled in 1,600 public schools, making it the largest district in the country. Although the overall student body is diverse, the schools themselves are not—The Civil Rights Project found that New York was the most segregated state in the country for Black students and second-most segregated for Latinx students.

Even before the pandemic disrupted the system, fewer than half of students in grades 3-8 were reading at grade level. And, students’ individual learning needs are complex: Students and parents speak in more than 180 languages; one in five students have a disability, and one in 10 have experienced homelessness.

“Public education is where we demonstrate how we want to invest in the future,” said Adams. “It points us towards a common narrative of who we want to be.”

SHOWTIME: With support from The Trust, New Victory/New42, Arts-Connection, and Community-Word Project created an arts-education training program for teaching artists and other staff at public schools.

ADVOCACY FOR EQUITABLE EDUCATION

The Trust funds projects that focus on system-wide improvements and reforms that advance equity, narrow the opportunity gap, and create safe and supportive learning environments.

“Equity matters,” said Eve Stotland, Trust program officer for education and human justice. “The state and city must meet the educational needs of all children, full stop.”

In 1993, The Trust helped the Campaign for Fiscal Equity sue New York State, arguing its funding formula did not adequately provide for students in the city’s public schools.

That 30-year fight of see-sawing legal decisions and legislative foot-dragging began with a parent who became an advocate: State Senator Robert Jackson.

In the 1990s, Jackson was president of Community School District 6—his daughters’ district was one of the most crowded and low achieving in the city. He recalled one meeting where city officials discussed more budget cuts: “I said, ‘That’s it. Something has to be done.’”

Jackson—who later served on the City Council—pulled in other districts and activists, initiating the Campaign for Fiscal Equity, which was supported by The Trust and its Donors’ Education Collaborative, a pooled fund.

After decades of courtroom trials, legislative sessions, and two marches from Manhattan to Albany, New York State finally agreed in 2021 to increase funding for city public schools by more than $1.2 billion. The funds would ensure that children who needed the most help—such as students with disabilities, English-language learners, and low-income students—would get it.

“The struggle continues every single day,” said Jackson. “You fight for the students. It doesn’t matter if you are Black or white or Hispanic or Asian or rich or poor. Education is the equalizer.”

A CHAMPION FOR READING

Literacy is the foundation for a quality education and it is critical to target it early for students to stay on track—in all their subjects. The Trust got a huge opportunity to advance early literacy when the New York State Attorney General asked it to redistribute funds recovered from a headline-making lawsuit regarding the disposition of the estate of philanthropist Brooke Astor.

“With court approval, we decided that the fund’s mission should recognize Mrs. Astor’s lifelong passion for reading and her dedication to literacy,” said Carl Distefano, former chief of the Trusts and Estates Section in the Attorney General’s Charities Bureau.

“It was abundantly clear,” Distefano continued, “that The Trust had the necessary breadth and depth of grantmaking experience and subject matter expertise.”

In 2012, The Trust assembled reading experts to help allocate $35 million to 20 nonprofits from the Brooke Astor New York City Education Fund.

The fund let 5,700 educators develop, test, and refine literacy projects in 290 city schools, with priority given to high-poverty schools and models that, if successful, could scale.

The result? Reading levels significantly improved annually for 94 percent of the 65,000 participating students.

“The Astor grants have been transformative,” said Mathew Moura, vice president of early reading at Teaching Matters. “To succeed, you need teachers equipped with the best research-backed methods of instruction to shape the reading and learning skills of generations. Ensuring that our students become readers in their early years is the foundation for successful learning—it will impact these children for the rest of their lives.”

In one example, four nonprofits—CAMBA, Chinese American Planning Council, Cypress Hills Local Development Corporation, and ExpandedED—piloted

the “Ready Readers” program, which trained afterschool staff to use best practices for teaching literacy, and established regular two-hour blocks of time for reading. Independent evaluators found it a success. Twenty percent more students were reading on grade level, and there was an 88 percent increase in one of three reading-skills assessments.

“Ready Readers opened new doors for our students,” said Gina Roman, director of literacy and service for Cypress Hills Local Development Corporation. “They explore the world around them through culturally relevant texts where they see themselves. Students read, discuss, ask questions, as well as get up and dance, laugh, draw, and write. It reaches a new level of comprehension that provides for a more meaningful learning experience.”

“It’s clear the Astor Fund’s innovations will continue to have an impact on reading instruction for many years to come,” said Distefano.

THE IMPORTANCE OF THE ARTS

Though arts education is mandated by the state, it is too often seen as a luxury that can be cut. The Trust was instrumental in supporting advocacy efforts in the 1990s that reversed a massive decline in arts instruction. Today, The Trust ensures that the New York City Arts in Education Roundtable continues fighting for arts instruction, which offers an effective way to reach students with diverse needs.

“The arts give everybody, including students with disabilities, the opportunity to express how they’re feeling in that particular moment,” said Courtney J. Boddie, vice president, education & school engagement, at New Victory/New42.

The Trust brought together experts to identify arts education strategies that would best serve students with disabilities who were in classes with general education peers. This resulted in New Victory working with ArtsConnection and Community-Word Project to create the Growing Inclusivity for Vibrant Engagement, or GIVE, project to ensure teaching artists, arts teachers, classroom teachers, arts administrators, related support staff, and others, are effectively trained to work with students with disabilities.

“What we’re attempting to do is shift minds around how to center students with disabilities, to create inclusive learning environments for them,” said Boddie. “In any room, you’re going to have students with some need for support, so the more we’re embedding that into our practice as a whole, everybody benefits.”

CONFRONTING MULTIPLE CHALLENGES

While basic skills such as literacy and numeracy are important, a child’s ability to learn is affected by their physical and emotional wellbeing. The Trust has helped support the whole child by:

Safeguarding health: The Trust helped Community Food Advocates spearhead the successful Lunch 4 Learning campaign to offer all students free, healthy lunches. And The Trust supported the New York School-based Health Foundation to improve the ability of school clinics to provide mental health services after the trauma of the COVID pandemic.

Rethinking school discipline: Morningside Center for Teaching Social Responsibility introduced alternatives to punitive discipline at several schools, leading to dramatic drops in suspensions and expulsions, which can lead to students turning their backs on their education and never graduating.

ADDRESSING NEEDS ON LONG ISLAND AND IN WESTCHESTER

Despite the perception that Long Island and Westchester are affluent suburban enclaves, their individual decentralized school systems have large numbers of high-needs students. Our affiliates support a variety of community-based nonprofits that work with public schools to ensure that students get access to essential services such as mental health care, career training, and legal counsel.

One example of our approach to reach historically underserved populations is the Westchester Community Foundation’s work with Latino U College Access. For first-generation students, the process of applying to college can be especially daunting. Immigrant families, in particular, may not be familiar with the application process and may be hampered if they are not fluent in English. Latino U puts college on the radar for middle and high school students and helps them navigate the application and financial aid processes.

Our Long Island Community Foundation, in particular, has helped counter the destructive social pressure that can demoralize girls and diminish academic performance. Its support of i-tri has built self-esteem and healthy habits among teens at East End middle schools. The women-led nonprofit combines triathlon training techniques with workshops that focus on stress and emotional resiliency. Ninety percent of participants significantly increased their fitness levels, and 80 percent of the program’s alumnae return as mentors.

Providing curricula that reflect diversity: Kids learn better if they can see themselves in their textbooks. That’s why The Trust helped the parent-led NYC Coalition for Educational Justice in its ongoing effort to press the city to modify policies and curricula to reflect the ethnic and racial makeup of students.

Helping immigrants: The Trust has regularly turned to Advocates for Children to ensure that parents—especially immigrant parents—can navigate the school system and get their children the services to which they are entitled. ImmSchools used a Trust grant for strategic planning to increase its capacity to work with staff, families, and students and ensure that schools are supportive of undocumented young people and their ability to apply to college.

Emilia Fiallo, ImmSchools New York City program manager, was an undocumented student herself. After high school, she worked amid the ovens in the back of a neighborhood bakery for months to save enough to enroll in Hunter College.

“When you get to eleventh grade, it hits you,” Fiallo said. “The reality that a lot of doors are just shut in your face. Your parents are telling you not to share with anyone that you’re undocumented because there’s fear of deportation. It makes you feel like giving up hope. We tell our kids that there is a community out there, that there is help—because this can feel very, very lonely for students.”

READY FOR LIFE

As it has for nearly 100 years, The Trust will continue to find and fund efforts that better enable schools to prepare our future thinkers, leaders, and entrepreneurs. Working with highly effective nonprofits, The Trust will support efforts that strengthen students’ basic skills, ensure every student has a fair shot, and prepare young people for college and careers. ■

“WE TELL KIDS THAT THERE IS A COMMUNITY OUT THERE, THAT THERE IS HELP.”

MAKING GRANTS FOR TODAY AND TOMORROW

The Trust's patient approach to systemic change paid dividends as the year's legislative and policy wins grew out of grants from years past, while grants made in 2022 brought immediate relief to many New Yorkers and planted seeds for future victories.

For almost a century, New Yorkers have established permanent funds with us to continue their commitment to causes they care about. The Trust's program team—experts with extensive experience in their fields—turn those funds into grants to improve the lives and livelihoods of everyone in the eight counties we serve.

These pages show a small sample of our 2022 impact, which is fueled by hard-working nonprofits and generous donors with the vision to share their good fortune. The ripple effect of this work will be felt for years to come.

HELPING ARTS GROUPS OF COLOR

The Mosaic Network and Fund, housed in The New York Community Trust, is a first-of-its-kind collaborative that aims to provide more equitable funding for African, Latinx, Asian, Arab, and Native American (ALAANA) arts groups in New York City. In 2022, this partnership, underwritten by 27 funders, provided more than $5 million in grants to 168 organizations citywide.

Since it began in 2018, Mosaic has helped create a growing, vibrant learning community of more than 200 active members representing ALAANA arts and cultural organizations and city-based arts philanthropies and funding intermediaries. It has facilitated the distribution of $10.4 million to date and has inspired other similar collaborations in cities nationwide. In 2023, the Network will become an independent entity.

NEW HOME FOR LGBTQ+ HISTORY

With a grant from The Trust, the American LGBTQ+ Museum is creating a plan for its collection in anticipation of its 2026 opening in a new addition at the New-York Historical Society. The Museum was established in 2017 to preserve, research, and share the history and culture of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, and queer people, as well as other gender and sexual identities. The museum will survey existing LGBTQ+ collections, create a policy for archival donations, and pilot at least one exhibition virtually or at another site. It will create educational exhibitions and programs, and steward oral histories, documents, art, and artifacts that share stories about everyday people and civic activism.

The Trust has a long commitment to funding and celebrating the contributions of LGBTQ+ communities in the city and was an early supporter of the Museum, providing funding to hire its first staff member.

This grant was made possible, in part, by the Bruce Dresner Fund, established for “the support and education of the gay and lesbian community.”

PROTECTING IMMIGRANTS

To aid local immigrants from Nepal, Adhikaar, a women-led nonprofit based in Queens, has taken a leadership role in a national coalition to gain permanent residency for immigrants who have lost their Temporary Protected Status (TPS).

Nepal lost its TPS-eligible status in 2018—three years after it was granted in the wake of a massive earthquake—throwing the lives of thousands of Nepalis in New York and across the United States into chaos. Adhikaar and its national partners brought a lawsuit, which resulted in extending TPS status to mid-2024, and they are negotiating with the current administration in Washington to redesignate Nepal, which is still recovering from the quake. In the meantime, with Trust help, its staff members are holding know-your-rights workshops, helping immigrants get legal assistance, and creating educational materials.

Adhikaar received one of 12 grants made in 2022 by our Fund for New Citizens, a donor collaborative, to groups helping local immigrants. The other nonprofits are African Communities Together, Damayan, DRUM - Desis Rising Up & Moving, Laal NYC, Laundry Workers Project, Lawyers Alliance for New York, New Immigrant Community Empowerment, Sapna NYC, Staten Island Community Job Center/La Colmena, Street Vendor Project-Urban Justice Center, and Workers Justice Project.

A WIN FOR AFFORDABLE HOUSING

A community's residents should have a voice in how their neighborhood changes and grows. That's why when a mega development was proposed in Astoria, Queens, The Trust funded organizing efforts that helped local residents get their voices heard. The neighborhood is known for its rich diversity of people, including a vibrant community of predominantly working-class Bengali-American families, who face rising rents.

"Multi-generational families are cramming into small apartments to stay in the neighborhood," said Sasha Wijeyeratne, executive director of the Committee Against Anti-Asian Violence. "They want to be close to their children's schools, their relatives, and their jobs. We want to make sure residents can stay in the community and have housing they can afford."

Through the Neighborhoods First funder collaborative, The Trust helped the Committee lead a coalition that mobilized residents to rally and testify at hearings. Thanks to these efforts and the persistence of the local City Council representative, the community won the designation of 1,650 affordable units, more than twice the original plan for the 3,000-unit development. While the city still faces a huge need for affordable housing, particularly for low-wage workers, the concessions in the Astoria project show that community activism can make a difference.

This grant was made possible by the Ruth and Gerald Dickler Community Housing Fund, which supports community housing projects and advocacy for affordable housing in New York City.

PREVENTING OVERDOSE DEATHS

Because more New Yorkers die of drug overdoses than homicides, suicides, and motor-vehicle crashes combined—an average of one death every four hours—we supported the development of the nation’s first overdose prevention centers in East Harlem and Washington Heights. These facilities, which have successfully operated in other global cities since the 1970s, provide a place where illegal drugs can be taken intravenously under the supervision of medical staff. Substance users are monitored and treated for overdosing, given sterile drug paraphernalia, and offered access to counseling and treatment referrals.

Operated by OnPointNYC, the facilities reduce the transmission of disease and prevent fatal overdoses. Since opening, the centers have reversed overdoses more than 800 times, pointing to the potential to save countless lives. They also reduce the amount of used syringes and drug paraphernalia discarded in local parks as a result of illegal drug use in public spaces. OnPointNYC hopes to become a national model to counter the country’s growing epidemic of drug-related deaths.

This grant was made possible, in part, by the Walter B. Ford Fund, created for the good of New York City.

HEALTH MAINTENANCE:
The Medicare Rights Center is helping older New Yorkers maintain their insurance coverage.

EXPANDED INSURANCE FOR OLDER ADULTS

Medicare—the federal health insurance for older adults and people with disabilities—is expensive. On average, enrollees pay about $15,000 each year in premiums, deductibles, coinsurance, copayments, and prescription drug costs. Many enrollees who struggle to afford these out-of-pocket costs are ineligible for Medicaid, the state-funded health coverage for low-income people. To help cover Medicare costs for those who do not qualify for Medicaid, every state, including New York, offers need-based financial assistance. But many low-income individuals do not know they are eligible, or are overwhelmed by the complex application process. Less than half of eligible New Yorkers are enrolled.

In 2022, Governor Hochul and the state legislature expanded eligibility for Medicaid and Medicare Savings Programs. As part of our efforts to strengthen the health safety net for the uninsured and underinsured, The Trust made a grant to the Medicare Rights Center to help enroll at least 500 older adults in Medicaid and 2,500 in Medicare financial assistance. The Center will lead information sessions for at least 10,000 professionals working with people who are likely to be newly eligible, and monitor the state’s implementation of the eligibility expansion.

This grant was made possible, in part, by the Katharine A. Park Fund for the Elderly.

BILLIONS FOR THE ENVIRONMENT

In 2022, New Yorkers voted for the largest environmental bond act in the state's history. Known as the Clean Water, Clean Air, Green Jobs Bond Act, this historic legislation might have remained under the radar had it not been for a successful voter engagement and education campaign operated by the New Yorkers for Clean Water and Jobs Coalition. The new bond act authorizes the use of $4.2 billion to fund critical environmental restoration projects throughout the state to improve water quality, restore wildlife habitat, protect family farms, create parks, modernize infrastructure, and expand renewable energy. The state plans to direct at least 35 percent of the funding toward low-income communities that are most impacted by pollution and climate change. In addition, the investments associated with the measure are projected to create nearly 100,000 new jobs.

The Trust-supported campaign successfully achieved many of our goals to reduce climate pollution, promote clean energy, and ensure all communities benefit from the clean energy revolution.

This grant was made possible by the Henry Phillip Kraft Family Memorial Fund, created to protect and conserve the environment.

FOR SHORE: A Trust-supported campaign led to passage of a historic environmental bond act, which will fight sea-level rise and protect shorelines, such as Long Island's Sunken Meadow State Park (pictured), through improving seagrass beds, wetlands, and shellfish populations.

“Life happens! It’s an ongoing cycle. I lost my dad, then my sister. She was a teacher and very much into education, the arts, and helping those with both promise and challenges.

Our parents were educationally oriented, and our greatest champions. They were always 112 percent behind us in our pursuits. Unfortunately, many kids don’t have that kind of support. I’ve seen too many who have not thrived due to a lack of education, opportunity, or both. We can’t afford to lose good hearts and minds!

Nine years ago, after talking with my mom, who was 94 years old, I thought: ‘How can I leave a legacy, not only for my sister, but for the family?’ And that’s why I created a fund dedicated to assisting minority women and girls interested in science, math, education, and the arts.

We all make our differences in different ways. It’s gratifying to know that you can be remembered in a way that’s meaningful and continues in perpetuity. It’s good to be able to give back, and I know the other three members of my family would have smilingly agreed.”

Patrice: “Everywhere we donate, there’s a purpose. It’s thoughtful. We deeply care about the respective causes that we’re investing in. We have a sense of fulfillment and satisfaction that in our little way we’re contributing, we’re making a bit of a difference in the community we live in.”

Christine: “Education is very important to us, and we like to give locally.”

Patrice: “Wherever we can, we pick areas where we can also contribute our time.”

Christine: “I would say for me there is a real joy of giving. We’re happy to be able to do it. We are really grateful we have the ability to do it.”

Patrice: “I am particularly grateful for the teams that work at The Trust—the quality of service, the responsiveness, the engagement. I have to say every interaction that we had since we started has really been quite positive. Obviously that makes a big difference and is a key reason why we’re still very happy to be working with The Trust.”

MARTHA KING

Senior program officer, Charles H. Revson Foundation

Donor-advised fund founder, member of The Trust's Giving Collective, a giving circle

“My parents, Sharon and Lambert King, believed that privilege should be shared to benefit and support the people, ideas, and actions that are building a more just society.

By continuing our family donor-advised fund, I am extending their legacy by giving to organizations that amplify and support the voices, rights, and stories of people that are often ignored or unheard.

We are always looking for efforts that build the city's vibrant democracy and creative spirit.

I am proud to be part of The Trust's community. It has its finger on the pulse of New York and listens to communities and local leaders, which is important to me.

I joined the Giving Collective to leverage my contribution with that of others and to learn about smaller and grassroots organizations that help give New York City its vitality. I've met incredible people through the Collective and find great joy in learning and working together with others who want to pay it forward.”

“My wife and I immigrated to the U.S. as teenagers. We were born and raised on opposite sides of the world yet lived similar lives under communism, with equally limited means and humble family backgrounds. Given these early experiences, we are very grateful for the opportunities that this country has provided us. In return, we would like to share our blessings by helping others.

One of our strongest passions is music and its power to bring comfort and hope in one of the quickest and profound ways. We are very involved with a nonprofit called Project: Music Heals Us, which brings live music performances and interactive programming to people who are older, disabled, rehabilitating, incarcerated, or experiencing homelessness.

The Trust’s staff can be very helpful with your planned giving process. It can provide information about organizations that help your causes, whether it is alleviating hunger, protecting the environment, aiding migrants, or providing healthcare. More importantly, the staff members can also connect like-minded donors by pooling resources to make your giving more impactful.”

WE MAKE GIVING EASY

The New York Community Trust makes giving easy. You can be part of a giving circle, collaborate with other funders to pool resources and tackle local issues, or you can simply donate and let Trust staff match your generosity with high-impact nonprofits meeting urgent needs.

At The Trust, we believe in the power of communal giving. By giving together, we can learn more about the nonprofits that make our world better and the issues they are addressing, while meeting new and inspiring people. Participating in a giving circle is simple. If there is an issue you'd like to work with others to fund, such as education or climate change, let's talk!

You also can join one of our existing giving circles.

For 25 years, WellMet Philanthropy has helped nascent grassroots nonprofits in New York. Its members—women of all ages and backgrounds—work together to recommend grants to promising direct service organizations that are often not yet on the radar of larger funders.

Through the Giving Collective, people under 50-years-old work together to fund local organizations. As Trust board member Stephen Robinson explained: "It's a force multiplier that combines contributions from our younger donors and allows them to collectively decide how they can make a significant impact and difference in the lives of New Yorkers."

COLLABORATIVE FUNDS

Unleashing the power of pooled resources

Bringing grantmakers together to make transformative change is one of our specialties. For more than 40 years, we've created a collaborative space to consolidate resources and expertise so we can tackle the biggest, toughest challenges at the appropriate scale.

A great example of this work is the Long Island Immigrant Children's Fund, which was created in 2014 as climate change, political upheaval, and poverty were driving immigration to the region—more than 3,000 immigrant children arrived in Long Island last year. Our fund is helping these young people enroll in school, and get mental health support and legal assistance. The Long Island Community Foundation is joined in this work by the Alpern Family Foundation, Episcopal Diocese of Long Island, Hagedorn Family Foundation, J.M. Kaplan Fund, Long Island Unitarian Universalist Fund, Rauch Foundation, Sisters of Saint Joseph, and individual donors.

In 2022, The Trust also managed these other funder collaboratives: All For The East End Fund, the Early Childhood Partners Fund, Fund for New Citizens, Good Neighbors Initiative, GoVoteNYC, Long Island Civic Engagement Fund, Long Island Racial Equity Initiative, Long Island Sound Stewardship Fund, Mosaic Network and Fund, New York City Workforce Development Fund, New York State Census Equity Fund, and Westchester Workforce Funders Collaborative.

COMMUNITY NEEDS FUND

Help dozens of nonprofits with one gift

The Community Needs Fund is a fast and easy way for you to directly support dozens of nonprofits tackling pressing issues of the day.

In 2022, caring individuals, families, and foundations helped us make grants from this fund that otherwise would not have been possible. The fund supported a range of projects, from training unemployed Staten Islanders for in-demand fields to providing legal assistance to asylum seekers. The fund helped Safe Horizon expand the Parenting Journey program, which provides mental health screenings, counseling, and support groups for women living in domestic violence shelters, while enabling social workers to screen the survivors' young children for signs of trauma. One Safe Horizon program participant said, "Before the Parenting Journey I was so scared to be a parent—I felt I needed guidance. Parenting Journey was like a compass for me. It showed me what I want and don't want to do as a parent and I know how to move forward better. Now I feel like I still need guidance, but I know it's a process."

We accept contributions to our Community Needs Fund all year round. You can give any amount, and if you have a fund with us, you can make a transfer using MyNYCT. You also can use your Required Minimum Distribution from your IRA.

GIVING THROUGH THE TRUST IS SIMPLE AND POWERFUL.

HERE FOR YOU.
HERE FOR YOUR CLIENTS.
HERE FOR GOOD.

With all of the uncertainty in the world, professional advisors—CPAs, trust & estate attorneys, and financial planners—value having a partner they can rely on in The New York Community Trust. We’ve been here for nearly 100 years, and we’ll be here for the next 100.

Advisors recommend us to their clients because we listen closely to their philanthropic priorities and make sure we can build solutions together that honor their wishes, withstand the test of time, and adapt to meet the challenges of the future.

We offer the tax benefits of giving to a public charity, customizable charitable solutions, philanthropic solutions for families, access to grantmaking professionals, investment services, and more.

We can help you help your clients as they decide what causes are important to them, how they want to structure their giving, and whether they want to involve family members.

PRIVATE FOUNDATION CONSIDERATIONS

For those looking to minimize administrative overhead and maximize charitable impact, a fund in The New York Community Trust can be a sound alternative to a private foundation. If your client already has a foundation that they are thinking of winding down, they might consider moving the assets to a charitable fund in The Trust. Your client can continue to drive the grantmaking during their lifetime, and we can carry on their legacy after they are gone.

CONTACT US TO DISCUSS YOUR CLIENTS’ CHARITABLE LEGACIES.

We can provide information about our fund types, suggested wording to help draft the gift instrument, and more.

ADVISORS' ADVICE

LONG ISLAND

LAWRENCE DAVIDOW

Senior and managing partner and Certified Elder Law Attorney, Davidow, Davidow, Siegel & Stern, LLP

Former chair of the Long Island Community Foundation

Donor-advised fund founder

“A community foundation gives an outlet to people who really want to make a difference. It helps my clients give money away in a way that makes sense to them, because they get assistance in vetting organizations and fine tuning exactly how they wish to make a difference.

My great-grandfather [pictured in framed photo] settled on Long Island in 1889. I'm the third generation running this practice. When I meet with clients planning their estates, I try to broaden the conversation from a particular charity to a cause. And when people realize that they can give to a cause while they're alive or leave a legacy—like through a fund with their name on it after their death—it changes the whole tenor of the conversation. It's not that a community foundation is right for every client, but it is a tool that should be discussed in an overall conversation about philanthropy.”

WESTCHESTER

RITA K. GILBERT

Partner, Hyman & Gilbert
Former advisory board chair, Westchester Community Foundation

Donor-advised fund founder, Legacy Society member

“The New York Community Trust can be a lifesaver for people with no children or close family relations. If they want to leave a legacy, I inform them how this can be done. Because The Trust is perpetual, clients' goals and aspirations will last forever.

One client came to me like a tabula rasa with no preconceived notion of what she wanted to do with her money. She left a legacy gift with The Trust and she's thrilled. She said, 'I can't think of a better way to leave my money.' That always makes me feel good, because I feel like I've done a service.

I never tell clients what to do, but I often just plant a seed that sprouts at some time in the future. Legacy gifts give clients a sense of purpose that they will be remembered for their generosity.”

NEW YORK CITY

DANA MARK

Partner, Private Client Services, Smith Gambrell Russell

“In my discussions with clients, The Trust has always been one of my initial go-to's and it has always turned out well. Sometimes you go to places and the answer is 'No, no, we can't do that,' while The Trust would say: 'Let's see what we can do.'

Every situation is unique. You really have to want to give to charity. Sometimes it works out to be the right solution for people. When all the pieces fall into place, it is rewarding.

Working with The Trust is like having your own little team where everybody knows what needs to be done and takes care of it. If a client wants to be charitable, The Trust can be a good fit because you've got the expertise, you've got the oversight. You're just getting so much bang for the buck by having The Trust in there, because you're in good hands.”

MEET THE TRUST'S LEADERSHIP

Twelve dedicated New Yorkers—selected for their judgment, integrity, and understanding of philanthropic needs—serve as both the Distribution Committee of The Trust and as the Board of Directors of Community Funds, Inc., our nonprofit corporate affiliate.

Six members are nominated by civic authorities representing the public: one by the Mayor of New York City; one by the Chief Judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit; one by the Co-Chairs of the Partnership for New York City; one by the Chairman of Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts; one by the President of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York; and one by the Chairman of the New York Academy of Medicine. INVESTING FOR THE FUTURE

We work with donors to select investment options that are appropriate for their grantmaking objectives.

Our financial staff is guided by dedicated, seasoned investment professionals who volunteer countless hours as members of our Investment Committee.

COMMUNITY FUNDS, INC., AND THE NEW YORK COMMUNITY TRUST

We consist of two entities: Community Funds, Inc., a New York State not-for-profit corporation, and The New York Community Trust, an unincorporated association of charitable trusts. Donors can set up funds in either. The two share a board and staff and operate as one. However, their investment vehicles are different.

If a donor chooses to set up a fund in Community Funds, Inc., the assets are managed by outside money managers and overseen by our staff and Investment Committee. Call or visit our website for a copy of our Certificate of Incorporation and bylaws.

If a donor chooses to set up a fund in The New York Community Trust, they must choose from one of our trustee banks. A list of these banks is on our website, or is available upon request. These banks have already adopted the Resolution and Declaration of Trust creating “The New York Community Trust” (the R&D). This document details the powers and duties of the trustee bank, and our Distribution Committee (governing board). The founding document must include the R&D by reference.

IMPACT INVESTING

In 2022, The Trust piloted an impact investing initiative to let donor-advised fund advisors do more than solely make grants with their funds. Our impact investing program, called Impact New York 2022, allows them to participate in the New York Pooled PRI Fund (NYPRI), which is managed by SeaChange Capital Partners and provides loans to nonprofits to purchase property, work through government reimbursement delays, and more. Among the recipients of loans are the Council of Peoples Organization, Center for Family Life in Sunset Park, and Gibney Dance.

By pooling funds, donors can provide larger financial support than any one individual could alone.

THE NEW YORK COMMUNITY TRUST

MEMBERS OF OUR LEGACY SOCIETY SUPPORT THE CAUSES THEY CARE ABOUT IN PERPETUITY.

Their charitable goals are as diverse as the people of our region, but they're linked together by their desire to create a better world for generations to come.

All donors who provide for permanent funds at The Trust, whether through wills, trusts, or beneficiary designations, or who commit to leave a balance in their existing donor-advised funds to support our work, are invited to join. Here are members who've joined during their lifetimes. In the Funds list in the back of the book, you'll find permanent funds whose founders we also count as members of the Legacy Society. If you have included The New York Community Trust in your will or estate plans, or are considering doing so, we want to honor you in our Legacy Society. Contact us at (212) 686-0010 or giving@nyct-cft.org.

A BANK TELLER'S LEGACY GROWS IN BROOKLYN

Seymour Wurzler was a Dime Savings Bank teller for many years. He was a Brooklyn native and Dodgers fan. When he passed in 1963, he created a fund through his estate to support some of his favorite Brooklyn charities. He also left a portion of his fund to be used for the good of the community. In 2022, his gift let us make a grant to the Local Initiatives Support Corporation to sustain networks providing services to small businesses in low-income communities in Brooklyn and citywide.

SUPPORT FOR A BETTER LIFE FOR OLDER WOMEN

Annie Rensselaer Tinker was born in 1884 into a family of lawyers. She was a forward thinker, wartime volunteer, fearless advocate for women's rights, and a lesbian. In her will, she created a bequest that led to the creation of an organization serving older women in need. In 2018—100 years after Annie wrote her will—the organization dissolved and transferred its assets to The Trust. Today her fund makes grants to organizations that improve the lives of older women. Recently, a grant to the Greenwich House supported mental health services for women over 80 living independently.

SOPRANO'S SUSTAINED ARIA

Kirsten Flagstad was a world-renowned opera soprano, famous for her Wagnerian performances such as Brünnhilde and Isolde. Raised in Norway in a family of musicians, she made her debut at the Metropolitan Opera in 1934. She passed away in 1962 after a robust career. The Metropolitan Opera Guild worked with The Trust to create a fund to honor her legacy by providing cash awards to vocalists, instrumentalists, and teachers in the field of opera. Our grants to the George London Foundation for Singers benefit performers in her memory.

CANCER PATIENT HELPS OTHERS FIGHT THE DISEASE

Orland Greene was a captain in the Navy during World War I and a stockbroker who loved boating. He was diagnosed with cancer in his 50s, and upon his death, he and his wife, Frances, created a fund to support the ancillary needs of people being treated for cancer. Because Medicaid covers much of the medical costs associated with the disease, their fund fills the remaining gaps. A 2022 grant let God's Love We Deliver feed cancer patients undergoing chemotherapy.

IMPROVING HEALTH FOR GENERATIONS

Jacob H. Schiff was an immigrant banker and businessman well-known for helping finance the expansion of American railroads and co-founding the American Jewish Committee and Montefiore Hospital. One of the first donors to The Trust, he created a fund in 1924 to be used for the improvement of health and welfare in New York City, including institutions or activities serving Jews. In 2022, his fund let the Jewish Association for Services for the Aged (JASA) train social-work graduate students to work with homeless older adults with complex needs.

ACTIVIST'S LIFE WORK ENDURES

James R. Dumpson was a social activist and public servant, with a career that was influential locally, nationally, and internationally, and spanned eight decades. A fund was established in honor of Dr. Dumpson on his 100th birthday in 2009. Members of Black Agency Executives contributed, as did The Trust, where he worked during his final years. A 2022 grant from the fund to New Yorkers for Children advanced efforts to redesign the city's foster care system to better meet the needs of the children it serves.
