Our Mission, Vision & Values.

In 2024, we not only celebrated our centennial, we also collaborated with our board, staff, and community to reaffirm and share our organizational mission, vision, and values.

As New York's community foundation, our mission is to foster and engage in enduring and innovative philanthropy.

Our vision is for equitable and thriving communities throughout New York City, Long Island, and Westchester.

We value collaboration. To respond to New York's ever-changing needs, we work collaboratively with donors, nonprofit partners, and communities. We believe those closest to the problems are closest to the solutions.

We value integrity. Our role as both a funder of nonprofits and a steward for our donors requires unwavering trust. Recognizing our privilege as a grantmaking foundation, we act with integrity in all we do. We are engaged and responsive.

We value equity & justice. All people deserve the right to live healthy, meaningful, and dignified lives. We strive to align our policies and practices with our beliefs while using our resources to amplify the voices and power of under-resourced and under-represented communities and effect systems change.

For New York. Forever.

From the Chair and President

Our commitment is to all New Yorkers.

As we write this, our region is in bloom. You might smell blossoms from a Brooklyn sidewalk, spot a piping plover on Long Island's shores, or catch a chorus of spring peepers as night falls in Westchester.

We're reminded of how lucky we are to lead a community foundation driven by thousands of donors, nonprofit colleagues, and local partners who share a deep connection to this extraordinary region and a commitment to serving all of its diverse communities—from Staten Island and Hempstead to the Bronx and Mount Vernon.

This shared commitment has never been more important than it is today. Local nonprofits and communities face great uncertainty, while New York's growing affordability crisis means more of our neighbors are unhoused, going hungry, and unable to get the services they need.

But we know from experience that no challenge is too big for New Yorkers when we work together and stay true to our shared values. The Trust, with its 100-year history of meeting our region's needs by both responding effectively in times of crisis and investing in long-term change, specializes in bringing New Yorkers together to build brighter futures.

Last year was no exception. We helped pass historic citywide zoning reforms to build much-needed housing across the boroughs. We supported a coalition of nonprofits that unified Long Island voters behind a ballot proposition funding vital improvements to local water quality. And our grantmaking in Westchester helped raise the county's minimum wage. These are just a few examples—you'll read about many more in the pages that follow.

This year, we are affirming our commitment to continuing to ensure that the opportunities and offerings that have helped our region thrive for the last century are available to all New Yorkers, today and for the next 100 years.

Thank you for your partnership.

In community,

Amy Freitag, President
Jamie Drake, Board Chair

Celebrating 100 Years.

Phew! It's hard to pack 100 years into one. We held six community events, ran a $3-million community grantmaking project, shared 100 little-known historical facts, gathered and shared your visions for our region, and launched an award-winning new brand. We connected with many old and new friends along the way.

Our Votes, Our Vision, Our Community

We asked New Yorkers to vote for the issues they thought would be most important in the coming year. We pledged to make grants totaling at least $1 million in 2025 to each of the three winning areas. New Yorkers across all five boroughs, Long Island, and Westchester selected affordable housing, mental and behavioral health, and nonprofit resilience.

You Spoke, We Listened!

We asked New Yorkers to share their visions for our region.

"My vision is for increased funding for the arts across cultural organizations and all five boroughs. Artistic literacy and exposure bridges gaps between cultures and promotes understanding." - Anonymous

"We envision NYC as a national leader, where health care professionals are equipped to support mothers facing maternal mental health challenges to ensure they don't suffer in silence and their children thrive."

Celebrations & Discussions

Our centennial events in the Bronx, Brooklyn, Long Island, Queens, Staten Island, and Westchester highlighted core issues facing our communities, such as food security, climate change, and justice system reform. They featured lively panel discussions, poetry, and live music. Donors, nonprofits, and community members joined The Trust's staff and board to break bread, share ideas, and network. Below are some takeaways.

"Partnerships between local farms and food justice advocates can create a more sustainable and equitable approach to fighting hunger. With nearly 600 farms across Long Island, we have the potential to be a game-changer for food access."

- Sol Marie Alfonso-Jones (at right), Trust Program Director, Long Island

"Forty percent of construction workers in New York State are immigrants. So rather than looking at immigrants needing housing, it's important to understand that immigrants are building the housing and are actually part of the solution."

- Carola Otero Bracco, Executive Director of Neighbors Link

"My wife, Susan, and I opened up the Calise Family Fund to be able to drive what we want to support for people with disabilities across the disability field."

For Caregivers.

Amid a deepening affordability crisis, New York faces a shortage of health care workers, one of the country's largest aging populations, and expensive child care. There has never been a greater urgency to invest in our care infrastructure—and in caregivers themselves.

“Quality, affordable care is essential for all New Yorkers, whether they're older adults living alone, parents navigating disability services, or members of the sandwich generation, simultaneously caring for children and aging relatives,” said Irfan Hasan, The Trust's vice president for programs and grants.

The Trust has a history of supporting older New Yorkers, families, and care providers. In the last few decades, we have worked with nonprofits to improve caregivers' wages, bring universal pre-K to city families, increase funding for older adult services, and improve labor laws. But more work lies ahead.

Feature Story

A roadmap for universal child care

Studies show that children who attend high-quality child care programs have better long-term health, education, and employment outcomes. For parents, and particularly mothers, access to child care often determines whether and to what extent they participate in the labor force.

But care for children is the largest monthly expense for many New York families. Across the state, families with just one child spend an average of 18 percent of their income on child care; in New York City, that figure increases to 25 percent. These costs, combined with a lack of affordable housing, are driving record numbers of young families to leave the city or relocate to more affordable states.

Trust grantee New Yorkers United for Child Care estimates that a full-scale universal child care program in New York State would cost $12 billion—about 6 percent of the state’s total budget. But the cost of parents leaving the workforce or moving out of state is much higher. In 2022, when caregiving responsibilities during the pandemic led parents to leave their jobs and families to relocate, New York City alone lost an estimated $23 billion in economic output and $2.2 billion in tax revenue.

“Universal child care would be a triple win for New Yorkers,” said Leigh Ross, program director at The Trust. “In addition to benefiting children, it would help more families stay in the city, improve our economy, and address gender inequities.”

Parents and allies mobilize

In 2023, when local organizer Rebecca Bailin founded New Yorkers United for Child Care to advocate for free, high-quality care for all New York children ages 5 and under, The Trust provided seed funding to help galvanize and train local parents to join the campaign.

The nonprofit has ensured universal child care is a visible priority for New York legislators. It made more than 70 media appearances in 2024 and released a five-year plan for achieving free universal child care across the state. The campaign also helped restore $112 million in funding for the city’s 3-K programs.

“Working- and middle-class people feel like we’re disappearing from the landscape of the city.”

- Edgar Alfonseca, Parent-Leader
New Yorkers United for Child Care

“We need to organize parents and would-be parents to make sure that our elected leaders know that we are paying attention,” said Bailin, who is applying the lessons she learned in a prior role organizing transit riders with Riders Alliance (also a Trust grantee).

Parent-leader Edgar Alfonseca and his wife, Suzanne Elgendy, live with their two-year-old son in Forest Hills, Queens, and work full-time as civil servants. Elgendy also works as an adjunct professor. Their search for child care has been riddled with obstacles.

“We’ve had to leave our neighborhood to get child care that meets our needs in terms of budget and hours, which means one of us has to add an extra 30 minutes to our commute,” Alfonseca said.

In addition to the challenges it poses for his own family, Alfonseca is concerned about how the issue contributes to other New Yorkers’ growing sense of alienation.

“Over the last few years, I’ve had a lot of close friends with kids move to different states. The child care crisis is shifting the landscape of the city from a place where people thought they could raise a kid to a place where only the hyper-wealthy can,” he said. “Working- and middle-class people feel like we’re disappearing from the landscape of the city.”

Investing in “the bedrock of our community”

“While parents struggle to pay for child care, providers often operate on razor-thin profit margins and struggle to attract and retain qualified staff,” said Lauren Perkins, a Trust program director for Westchester. “Many don’t have the budget to offer competitive wages for these demanding jobs.”

To address this issue in New York City and Westchester, The Trust partners with All Our Kin, a nonprofit that trains and supports family child care providers serving chronically under-resourced communities. It provides financial literacy, licensing, and marketing support that has helped business owners achieve average income increases of 20 to 25 percent.

“Child care providers are the bedrock of our community, and there needs to be deeper public investment to reflect their value,” said Erica Buchanan, vice president of the nonprofit’s New York programs. “Some providers are working 14-plus hours a day, juggling care, education, and the pressures of running a business—and they’re still struggling to earn a reasonable income.”

“We strive to make sure our families know that they are not alone, there’s no shame, and there’s a community that understands where they are coming from that can help.”

– Mitchel Wu, Director of Queens Community Services for the Chinese-American Planning Council

Trust donors like Judy Esterquest recognize the importance of investing in high-quality centers that lay a strong foundation for the next generation.

In 2015, Esterquest set up a donor-advised fund at The Trust’s Long Island office in memory of her late husband, Michael J. Fleming. She uses her fund to support the Children’s Greenhouse, the child care center their daughter, Rebecca, attended, which serves students and employees at Nassau Community College, where Fleming was on the faculty.

“I knew what I wanted, but not how to do it. Marie Smith and David Okorn from The Trust’s Long Island office gave me so many helpful suggestions and recommendations,” Esterquest said. “They made my options and choices really clear.”

When Esterquest began planning her estate, she considered her attorney’s advice to start a private foundation. After weighing her options, she decided a legacy fund at The Trust, where she already had a donor-advised fund, would better serve her giving goals. Her fund will support the Children’s Greenhouse in perpetuity in her name. And if the center ever closes, The Trust will use her fund to support similar programs.

“After working with The Trust for almost 10 years, I know I can trust them to understand and honor my charitable intentions. They are not looking for loopholes,” Esterquest said.

Supporting caregivers of people with disabilities

Lisa LePage raised her daughter, Lauren, who has cerebral palsy and developmental disabilities, in Harrison, New York. LePage sees family caregivers of children with disabilities as a “hidden population” who lack support and resources and often feel isolated.

When she was planning her estate, LePage decided to include lasting support for these caregivers—especially those with fewer resources.

“You often have to choose between having a full-time job and not getting all the necessary services, or sacrificing that income and getting the services—which is what I chose to do,” she said. “But I was fortunate enough where I could do that. A lot of people aren’t. They have to survive, and it’s not right that they can’t have a better life because the funding isn’t there.”

After LePage’s attorney recommended The Trust, she left a bequest in her will to create a fund dedicated to improving the lives of people with developmental or intellectual disabilities in Westchester.

Families connect with early intervention

Early diagnosis and services for children with disabilities can make a difference in everything from their ability to meet developmental and academic milestones to their emotional well-being and general attitude towards school.

While a federal mandate theoretically provides access to early intervention evaluations and services for children with disabilities, the reality is far different. Many families do not have the time or support to complete complex applications, get the appropriate evaluations, or advocate for the services their children need.

The Trust has partnered with INCLUDEnyc, a leading nonprofit for families of children with disabilities, since its founding in 1983. A recent grant from The Trust is helping the nonprofit offer workshops, informational videos, community outreach, a help line, and other support to families seeking services.

“Early intervention is so critical. So many of our families don’t know they need us until they really need us,” said Cheryelle Cruickshank, INCLUDEnyc’s executive director. “That’s why we want to be a resource for any family with children with disabilities, whether known or suspected, so they can develop their own advocacy skills and even support other families in their communities.”

Connecting across cultural barriers

“We strive to make sure our families know that they are not alone, there’s no shame, and there’s a community that understands where they are coming from that can help,” said Mitchel Wu, director of Queens community services for the Chinese-American Planning Council, the country’s largest social service provider for Asian Americans.

Language and cultural barriers can intensify the challenges families of children with disabilities face. With recent Trust funding, the Council has expanded a program to educate parents about disability rights and available services and conduct a community survey to identify service gaps and priorities.

“There’s a misconception that you can overcome many of the challenges and barriers by just translating materials or using interpretation,” Wu said. “But cultural competency means being aware that some parents don’t understand certain programs, and that cultural stigmas around disability can run deep.”

The Trust is also supporting grassroots organizations that provide services to families of children with disabilities in under-resourced neighborhoods. Many of these small groups are led by local community members who are also parents of children with disabilities. These leaders speak the language—literally and figuratively—and understand the cultural intricacies of the families they serve.

Care for older New Yorkers

The more than 4.6 million adults ages 60 and over in New York are essential to the economic, social, and cultural vibrancy of our state. By 2030, this population is expected to reach 5.3 million.

“The Trust is committed to supporting programs that ensure older residents of NYC, Long Island, and Westchester have every opportunity to age with dignity and independence,” said Rachel Pardoe, a Trust program director. “Our region has so much to offer older adults—from social connection to learning and cultural opportunities.”

Thanks to legacy donors like Katharine Park, who wanted to reduce loneliness among older adults, our grants have connected aging New Yorkers to health and wellness activities, dance and art classes, and community events.

Unfortunately, many nursing homes that care for older adults are dangerously understaffed and not sufficiently monitored. Avoidable deaths in New York nursing homes during the pandemic prompted state and federal reforms to increase staffing and direct more funds to resident care. Yet many nursing homes still have not complied with new regulations.

“Access to poor-quality care is not access to care,” said Richard Mollot, executive director of the Long Term Care Community Coalition.

Trust support helped the Coalition advocate for improved oversight of care facilities during the pandemic, speaking to the media and testifying at legislative hearings. It published a study in 2024 which found that, despite federal requirements that medical directors oversee the clinical care of residents, more than one-third of nursing homes reported no onsite medical director presence whatsoever.

“Access to poor-quality care is not access to care.”

Long Term Care Community Coalition

Today, the Coalition is working to ensure hard-won reforms get enforced, and that the standard of care for residents is improving.

Ending 24-hour shifts

Home health care workers offer safety, companionship, and care for aging New Yorkers. Despite the valuable service they provide, this workforce—comprised mostly of immigrant women of color—faces grueling hours and poor wages.

Many home health care agencies require employees to work 24-hour shifts, while paying them for only 13 of those hours and deducting 11 for sleeping and eating. But patients often require around-the-clock care, and few workers receive the breaks or compensation they are entitled to. Faced with the threat of homelessness or losing health insurance, many of these workers are calling for fair labor practices and a stronger social safety net for all New Yorkers.

With funding from The Trust, National Mobilization Against Sweatshops (NMASS) partnered with the Chinese Staff & Workers Association, Flushing Workers Center, and Women Against Racist Violence to bring home health care workers together to eliminate their 24-hour shifts.

While legislation has not yet passed, the organizing is changing the industry standard. The workers' pressure has caused some employers to phase out 24-hour shifts.

“I’ve seen how our unity is our strength,” said NMASS member Luz Estrella. “I want this justice for my grandchildren. I want to make things right for them.”

Special Report

From L to R: Jacob Schiff, a Jewish American businessman and philanthropist, is memorialized through a fund at The Trust that supports the health and welfare of New Yorkers; New York Immigration Coalition members at a 2018 rally for children who came to the U.S. as undocumented immigrants; the Fund for the Newest New Yorkers at The Trust recently supported nonprofits like The Door (pictured) to ramp-up legal services for immigrants.

1924

The Jacob Schiff Memorial Fund

In 1924, a New Yorker named Frieda Schiff Warburg established one of The Trust's first funds, in memory of her father, Jacob Schiff. Frieda dedicated the fund to supporting "the relief of individuals in distress," including through nursing services at the Henry Street Settlement. In the decades since, her fund has helped fuel our grantmaking to provide legal support, health care, financial literacy classes, and older adult services to immigrant communities throughout the region.

The Fund for New Citizens

When President Reagan signed the Immigration Control and Reform Act into law in 1986, more than 100,000 New Yorkers became eligible for lawful permanent residence. To help them navigate the new law, The Trust gathered foundation partners to form a funder collaborative called the Fund for New Citizens.

During its 37 years, the Fund made $27 million in grants to strengthen immigrant-led organizations, challenge punitive immigration laws, promote pro-immigrant policies, and support legal services. One of the Fund's proudest legacies was helping to create the New York Immigration Coalition to unite smaller immigrant-serving nonprofits across the region. The Fund closed after awarding its final grants in November 2024.

The Funds for the Newest New Yorkers

In response to the arrival of more than 200,000 migrants and asylum seekers in New York City since the spring of 2022, The Trust partnered with the Robin Hood Foundation to establish The Funds for the Newest New Yorkers. The two allied funds brought together individuals, corporations, and other philanthropic partners to make more than $5.6 million in grants in December 2024.

These grants supported 22 frontline nonprofits promoting stability and long-term integration for new arrivals, including expanding access to case management, legal services, education, job training, health care, and other supports.

2024

“As an educator and an immigrant myself, I am deeply committed to holistically supporting young immigrant students and their families. Participating on this fund’s grantmaking committee holds special personal and professional significance for me.”

- Rosmery Milczewski, Assistant Principal, The Flushing International High School; Grantmaking Committee Member, The Fund for the Newest New Yorkers at The New York Community Trust

For Immigrants. Forever.

New York is celebrated for its history as a beacon for immigrants, and for the incredible contributions of its immigrant communities. It’s only fitting that The Trust has supported these New Yorkers throughout our own history. In fact, some of our earliest grants went to programs providing immigrants with health care, child care, community centers, and more.

A century later, we remain a steadfast champion of immigrant communities across the region. Our grantmaking today helps immigrant-serving nonprofits provide legal services, job training, education, case management, and more. We’re committed to continuing to support the local nonprofits that help the newest New Yorkers thrive.

Check out our giving guide to learn about some of the great local nonprofits supporting immigrant newcomers.

Grants in Action.

Shawn V. Morehead
Executive Vice President and Chief Program Officer

In 2024, many New Yorkers struggled to meet basic needs, including housing and food. Tens of thousands of migrants arrived in the region looking to start new lives. Our grants helped meet the needs of struggling New Yorkers regardless of when they set down roots here, coordinating food distribution, providing mental health support, and offering job training and placement in growing sectors.

Beyond helping secure these essentials, The Trust's grants empowered community advocacy to improve the region's public systems and infrastructure, from schools to transit and housing vouchers. Our grants raised the voices of New Yorkers who too often do not have the ear of decision makers.

The grants below, from 2024, represent just a handful of our region's exemplary nonprofits and just a fraction of The Trust's grantmaking. But I hope they'll inspire you to join us as we combine services for those in need with advocacy to encourage a more equitable region.

Cleaner air for street vendors & pedestrians

Nearly all of New York City's more than 6,000 food carts and trucks use unregulated gasoline-powered generators that pollute the air, creating health risks for vendors and anyone nearby. The Urban Justice Center's Street Vendor Project is helping street food vendors adopt environmentally responsible practices and technologies. This includes finding ways to connect vendors to the electric grid and expanding battery use as alternatives to fossil fuel generators. Our Shaw Foundation (est. 1966), George T. Mortimer Foundation (est. 1970), and Seymour B. Wurzler Bequest (est. 1963) funds made this grant possible.

A street vendor uses a battery-powered energy source to replace his gasoline-powered generator, reducing toxic emissions.

We weave together hundreds of legacy funds to fuel our competitive grantmaking program.

Free school meals for all New Yorkers

More than half of Long Island families cannot afford school lunch fees but are currently ineligible for free school meals. Providing free meals for all students, regardless of income, reduces food insecurity, supports students' academic performance, and eliminates stigma. With a grant from The Trust, Community Food Advocates worked with schools and partnered with Hunger Solutions New York on local and state advocacy that led to a historic win in May 2025, when New York enacted statewide, universal free school meals for the 2025-2026 school year. Our Greentree Foundation Fund (est. 2003), which provides flexible funding for our strategic grantmaking, supported this grant.

“Nonprofits like Community Food Advocates are vital partners in addressing the food crisis facing 280,000 Long Islanders—including 58,000 children. We’re grateful to the generous donors whose legacy gifts help us support the nonprofits that are a lifeline for local communities.”

The Trust - Long Island

Grants in Action

Stopping evictions before they start

Nearly one third of New York City's affordable housing tenants are two or more months behind on rent, putting them at risk of eviction and homelessness. But many can access government-funded emergency rental assistance only after landlords take legal action. A Trust grant is helping Enterprise Community Partners work with affordable housing providers and tenants to address rent arrears and avoid eviction proceedings. Our Emil and Zerline Hahnloser-Richard Bak (est. 1975) and Lucy Wortham James Memorial (est. 1939) funds made this grant possible.

Higher wages for human service workers

The average nonprofit human service worker earns well below the cost of living. Many earn poverty-level wages, and many are eligible for the same public benefits they help deliver to clients. The Trust is partnering with the anti-poverty campaign Bring Up Minimum Pay to help it advocate for state legislation that would provide a living wage for nonprofit workers, including annual adjustments for inflation. Our Eugene Di Mattina Fund (est. 2013) supported this grant.

Ending cycles of domestic violence

Young children make up the majority of domestic violence shelter residents. And children who witness or are victims of domestic violence are more likely to end up in abusive relationships later in life. Urban Resource Institute is bringing its age-appropriate healthy relationship workshops to children in kindergarten through second grade living in domestic violence shelters to help them recognize abuse and establish healthy relationship boundaries. Our Mildred Anna Williams (est. 1940) and Davis Polk and Wardwell (est. 1999) funds supported this grant.

Improved instruction for struggling early readers

Roughly half of NYC public school students in third through eighth grades are proficient readers. Teaching Matters specializes in equipping educators with the skills and resources to become more effective. With a Trust grant, it is supporting teachers in small-group instruction for kindergarten-through-second-grade students who struggle to master “pre-reading” skills, such as assigning sounds to letters. It is also preparing schools to track and monitor student reading progress in future years. Our Drexel Burnham Lambert Fund (est. 1995) made this grant possible.

Nonprofits can apply for a grant through our rolling open application process.

Fare discounts for paratransit riders

The MTA offers fare discounts for people with disabilities who ride the subway and buses but not for those who use Access-A-Ride paratransit, many of whom live on fixed incomes. New York Lawyers for the Public Interest and Mobilization for Justice, members of the Trust-supported Access-A-Ride Reform Group (AARRG!), achieved a decisive litigation victory in June 2024, when the NYS Supreme Court denied an MTA motion to dismiss, allowing a case to proceed that seeks to extend equal fare discounts to paratransit riders. Our Wilhelm Loewenstein Memorial Fund (est. 1940), which supports health and welfare in New York City, helped make this grant possible.

Education instead of incarceration for Westchester's young people

Providing community support, case management, and education opportunities to people leaving prison and jail reduces their chances of reincarceration and helps break cycles of trauma and harm.

914United provides services and advocacy to justice-involved young people in Westchester and the Lower Hudson Valley. A Trust grant is helping it connect young people leaving county custody with educational and career development workshops, art therapy, peer mentoring, and ongoing case management and community services. Our DeWitt Wallace Fund for Youth (est. 2008) made this grant possible.

“We’re proud to make grants to nonprofits like 914United that are advancing equity and justice throughout Westchester County. Alongside our grantmaking, our Westchester Index is a resource for action the entire community can use to examine and address disparities across racial, ethnic, and socioeconomic divides.”

Better mental health help for LGBTQ+ young people

Young New Yorkers face an unprecedented mental health crisis and lengthy delays getting treatment. For LGBTQ+ young people, who experience bullying, discrimination, and higher rates of anxiety and depression, the need is particularly acute. With Trust support, the Brooklyn Community Pride Center, which is housed in the Major R. Owens Health and Wellness Community Center, is reaching additional young people with counseling and referrals to health care, housing, and employment services. Our Bruce Dresner Fund (est. 1993), which supports the gay and lesbian community, made this grant possible.

Our donors reflect the beautiful diversity of our eight-county region, and we are proud to help each of them amplify their charitable impact through community-powered giving.

For more than 100 years, The Trust has helped New Yorkers like you champion the communities and causes they hold dear. They've chosen us for our giving expertise, educational offerings, personal service, and opportunities to combine their generosity to achieve greater results.

On the next page are a few ways our donors have put The Trust to work. I invite you to reach out to us today so we can help you with your unique giving goals.

Did you know?

You can give any amount to our Community Needs Fund at any time.

I use my IRA to meet urgent community needs.

"I direct distributions from my IRA to The New York Community Trust's Community Needs Fund. The distribution isn't taxable, but does count towards my required minimum distribution, making it even more beneficial. Best of all, I love being a part of collective philanthropy, where my gift is pooled with others to make a BIG impact."

– Anonymous donor

I counseled my friend on where to entrust her legacy.

"When Henriette was planning her estate, I suggested The Trust. It wasn't the only decision she could make, but it was the best choice because her money would be used to preserve nature, a cause that she was passionate about."

– Frank Watson

Henriette Granville Suhr was a devoted designer and gardener. She created a fund with us to provide permanent support for environmental causes in Westchester.

I can give more when I give appreciated stock directly to my donor-advised fund.

"My portfolio is overweighted in tech stocks, but selling means steep capital gains. Instead, I give that stock to my donor-advised fund at The Trust, avoiding taxes and fueling years of giving."

– Amy Wolf
Trust staff member
and donor

I got philanthropic advice to help honor our loved one.

"Thank you so much for all you did to find the perfect way to honor Harry, do all the digging to answer our questions, and accompany me to visit the grantees."

– Arline Vogel
Trust donor

Our team worked with Arline and family members to create a giving strategy and identify nonprofits that would honor the life of Arline's beloved partner, Harry S. Precourt.

Fertilizing the City's Grassroots.

A giving circle delivers community-powered magic for 25 years.

The women of WellMet Philanthropy share a love of New York and the organizations that keep it great. The group's 40 members contribute their time, talent, and treasure to fostering the next generation of NYC nonprofits.

"Together, we find, vet, visit, and fund extraordinary emerging organizations providing critical services to their communities in all five boroughs," said member Nancy Talbot. WellMet members use a shared donor-advised fund at The New York Community Trust to carry out their grantmaking. The Trust provides philanthropic services, including grantmaking guidance, processing, and fund management. Several members also have their own donor-advised funds at The Trust.

While the group generally makes one-time grants, the relationships it builds with grantees can last a lifetime. In 2006, a WellMet grant helped the nonprofit Avenues for Justice expand its capacity to connect court-involved young people with court advocacy, mental health, and employment services.

$3.9M
in grants

200+
organizations
across NYC

“Since that initial grant, WellMet has opened doors to other funding,” said Liz Frederick, the nonprofit’s executive director. “Members have connected me with other foundation leaders, made individual gifts to our organization, and contributed books and other school supplies to our two community centers in the East Village and Harlem.”

Our Specialties:

Customized funds that match charitable priorities

Whether your client is a champion of the environment, the arts, or anything in between, they can create a fund tailored to their charitable goals.

Working with private foundations

Our in-house experts can run grantmaking programs, provide advising, work with foundations interested in winding down, and more. The Trust team will tailor our support to meet your client's needs.

Donor-advised funds

The Trust created the first donor-advised fund in 1931, and we've successfully managed DAFs ever since. Your client can donate a variety of assets and will have access to our issue-area expertise, exclusive events, an easy-to-use grantmaking portal, and other specialized donor services.

Philanthropic advising

Our deep bench of experts, investment in thriving communities, and commitment to meeting donors' needs enable us to efficiently identify groups that align with donors' values and objectives.

Contact us to discuss your client's charitable goals

We can provide information about our funds, suggested wording to help draft gift instruments, and more.

In Memoriam:

Robert M. Kaufman
(1931-2024)

Robert "Bob" Kaufman helped guide The Trust from 1987 to 2024 as its longest-serving board member. He joined us as a board member, then served as vice chair, and later as a consulting member and vice-chair emeritus. We remember Bob as a generous colleague and superb governor dedicated to improving our judicial system, political process, health care institutions, and neighborhoods. He left a proud legacy of grantmaking through his multiple funds at The Trust.

Highlights from 2024.

Unaudited financial highlights for 2024 are shared here.

Total expenditures: $228.3 million

Grants by program area: $203.9 million

Total assets by fund type: $3.3 billion

The independent auditor's report will be posted on our website in July 2025, accessible via this QR code.

- Unrestricted / Donor-advised: All grantmaking from these funds is driven by suggestions from their donor-advisors. The assets in these funds are considered unrestricted, as they are not dedicated to a particular purpose upon creation.
- Unrestricted / Non-advised: The Trust's expert team directs the grants from these funds, which provide valuable, flexible support for our competitive grantmaking program.
- Field-of-Interest: These funds support specific causes chosen by the donors who create the funds, with grantmaking directed by The Trust's expert team.
- Designated: These funds provide ongoing support to one or more specific nonprofits selected by the donors who create the funds, with ongoing stewardship by The Trust team.
- Scholarship: Some of these funds support The New York Community Trust Scholarship Program, which helps young New Yorkers continue their education after high school, while others have additional parameters set by donors.

How Legacy Funds Work.

Plans you make now can provide ongoing support for the causes you care about far into the future. Creating a legacy fund with us is a surprisingly simple but deeply meaningful way to have your name (or your anonymous generosity) live on as an enduring force for good in our region.

Choose your focus and create the fund.

You decide whether to support our region, specific causes, particular nonprofits, or a mix of these. A simple document sets out the details, and no financial transfer is required at the outset.

Make preparations and nurture over time.

You can direct gifts to your fund in a variety of ways, including through your will, trust, retirement plan, or other planning arrangements—we can help by providing straightforward language to share with your advisors.

Your fund grows and blossoms.

Once your fund receives all or part of your gift, the magic begins! With careful oversight, the principal of the fund—the gifts you arranged through your will or other plan—is invested for long-term growth.

Your fund yields ongoing financial support.

For generations to come, our expert team will draw from your fund to fuel grants to exemplary nonprofits—like the ones featured in these pages—to support local communities and stay true to your intentions in an ever-changing world. Over time, permanent funds will give away more than the initial gift.

Introducing The Trust's Excelsior Society, our community of legacy donors.

With foresight and thoughtfulness, members of our Excelsior Society have made a profound commitment to the future.

While their charitable goals are varied, Excelsior members are connected by their desire to create a better world for future generations.

The Excelsior Society (formerly the Legacy Society) celebrates people who have laid the groundwork for charitable legacies with The Trust through wills, trusts, beneficiary designations, and other estate arrangements. Some have committed to leaving a balance in their existing donor-advised funds to sustain our region for years to come.

If you have included The New York Community Trust in your will or other estate plans, we want to honor you in our Excelsior Society. To let us know about your plans or to learn more, contact Audra Lewton, director of planned giving, at (212) 686-2461 or alewton@thenytrust.org.

Legacy Fund vs. Today's Challenge

Raymond H. Fiero Fund fights harmful bacteria

The Fiero Fund (est. 1984) was created to prevent, heal, or cure diseases for which no practical medical or surgical remedy has been discovered.

Today, Hackensack Meridian Hospitals Center for Discovery and Innovation is using a grant from this fund to lead a collaboration with Quest Laboratories and Rutgers University that uses new genome sequencing techniques to develop a rapid test to identify bacteria types. When time is of the essence, this will allow faster and more targeted treatment for two of the most common antibiotic-resistant bacteria.

Legacy Fund vs. Today's Challenge

Laura Spelman Rockefeller Memorial Fund addresses overdose deaths

The Rockefeller Fund (est. 1928) was created to improve health and welfare in New York City.

The city had more than 3,000 drug overdose deaths in 2023. We're using this fund to support OnPoint NYC, which runs the country's only two overdose prevention centers, located in Washington Heights and East Harlem. Our latest grant is helping to upgrade technology to better track the health of OnPoint's clients and replicate its centers' success at other sites.

Legacy Fund vs. Today's Challenge

Dewitt Wallace Fund for Youth defends school funding

The Wallace Fund (est. 1982) supports learning and enrichment opportunities for children and youth to help them develop their full potential for productive adulthood.

How much state money goes to New York City public schools has been hotly debated for decades. Since the 1980s, The Trust has supported litigation, research, and advocacy to ensure that the city's public schools get their fair share of state education funding. The hard-won progress now hangs in the balance as New York's governor looks to make changes. A grant to Education Trust is helping to organize and advocate for adequate education funding for large under-resourced urban school districts, including in New York City.

Legacy Fund vs. Today's Challenge

Fund tackles vaping among adolescents & teens

The Drexel Burnham Lambert Fund (est. 1995) is dedicated to supporting and educating children, youth, and families.

The CATCH Global Foundation is using our grant to expand its anti-vaping training in NYC schools.

Its proven approach conveys vaping's harmful effects—such as stunting brain development, hindering learning, and causing severe respiratory problems—and gives educators the tools to curb this dangerous behavior.

Legacy Fund vs. Today's Challenge

Leone Scott Wise Fund faces Alzheimer's on Long Island

The Wise Fund (est. 1986) supports care, companionship, and attention to the homebound elderly in Nassau County.

A grant to the Long Island Alzheimer's and Dementia Center is helping those with the disease and their caregivers. Dementia strains both the diagnosed individual and family caregivers, whose constant responsibility can lead to burnout and other health issues. The Center offers people with dementia activities, such as music, light exercise, and conversation, that have been shown to slow the disease's progression. Its programs also provide caregivers with much-needed breaks and access to counseling.

Legacy Fund vs. Today's Challenge

A memorial fund improves history classes in Westchester

The Miriam and Elsie Reinhart Memorial Fund (est. 1991) exists to develop better interpersonal communication skills between teachers and students, with an emphasis on reducing bias.

A grant to Historic Hudson Valley supports a program that trains dozens of teachers to educate fourth and fifth graders about the history of slavery in the United States. The curriculum, which includes visits from experts and field trips, offers students a more complete understanding of how slavery affected enslaved people and their descendants, and of the political and economic impacts of slavery in New York State.

Apply for a grant.

We're committed to critical issues that may not lend themselves to easy solutions, while remaining open to projects that tackle emerging issues and to organizations that may be new to us.
